MANIFESTO OF THE EMPEROR NAPOLEON.

The following is the text of a letter addressed by the Emperor of the French to M. Thiers, announcing his intention to place himself at the head of the National Assembly:

To M. Thiers.

I have just received from the National Assembly the presentation of a resolution recommending me to take the head of the National Assembly. I have taken this step, not from any wish of my own, but from a sense of the necessity of guarding the interests of the Fatherland against the catastrophe which is threatening it.

The Assembly has entrusted to me the mission of maintaining order and establishing a government, and I accept this trust with the determination to perform it with entire fidelity.

I, therefore, on the 1st of January, 1814, will assume the direction of the government, and will issue such measures as may be necessary for the defense of France and the maintenance of order.

Napoleon Bonaparte.

THE BAYES CASE.

The case of Bayes v. Attorney-General, which was brought to the House of Lords on the 26th instant, was heard this morning. The plaintiff is a person who has been in possession of certain lands for many years, and the defendant is the Attorney-General. The case turns on the question whether the defendant has the power to eject the plaintiff from the premises.

The plaintiff, who is of the name of Bayes, has occupied the land for a long time, and the defendant contends that the plaintiff has no right to continue in possession.

The judge, Mr. Justice Bay, delivered his judgment in favor of the defendant, and the plaintiff has been ordered to vacate the premises.

The case will now be heard by the House of Lords, and the plaintiff will have an opportunity to state his case.

The defendant has intimated that he will appeal to the House of Lords, and the plaintiff will have an opportunity to state his case.

The matter will now be heard by the House of Lords, and the plaintiff will have an opportunity to state his case.

EXCITING SCENE AT A FIRE.

Between one and two o'clock on Sunday morning, in the town of New Bedford, Mass., there occurred a fire which defies description. The fire was in the house occupied by Mr. and Mrs. E. A. Shaw. The Shaw family are long residents of the town, and were noted for their kindness and hospitality. They kept a boarding house, and the building was filled with lodgers. The fire started in the basement, and quickly spread to the other floors. It was a cold night, and the flames swept through the building with great rapidity. The lodgers were惊慌失措, and many of them were injured in the rushed to safety. The fire was finally extinguished after a long struggle, but the building was destroyed.

The Red Cross Society was quick to respond, and sent aid to the families affected. The community came together to support those who lost their homes in the fire. This tragic event highlights the importance of preparedness and community support in times of crisis.
